Water is vital for all living things to survive – a few days without it and people die. Yet for 80 countries – with 40 percent of the world's population – lack of water is a serious problem. How to get enough water to drink, cook and wash with is a daily struggle. Clean water on tap is a dream that is not likely to come true.

There is not enough water to drink or keep crops and farm animals alive. Increases in population mean there is less water available for each person. Climate change, caused by pollution of atmosphere, is making some countries which are already short of water even hotter and drier. Demand for water is doubling every 20 years.

The fresh clean water that is available is often wasted and misused. Poor people have no money to pump and pipe water. The United Nations believes that lack of clean water is becoming a terrible crisis for the world.
